Alaska Wilderness Lodge with Full Off-Grid Infrastructure

The heart of the property is the 2,700-square-foot main lodge, originally built in the late 1990s. It features five bedrooms and two full bathrooms, making it suitable for large group gatherings, corporate retreats, or owner's quarters. The lodge includes a commercial kitchen with updated appliances, generous living space, and heating via propane and a newly installed pellet stove.

Surrounding the lodge are five guest cabins—four smaller cabins, each approximately 520 square feet, offer an open floor plan, full bathroom, and loft sleeping space. The larger 970-square-foot cabin includes two separate bedrooms, full bath downstairs, loft with 4 beds, and an additional half bath upstairs, ideal for families or VIP guests.

Updated Systems & Utilities for Remote Comfort

Cove Peaks Lodge operates fully off-grid with a thoughtfully designed infrastructure system. Power is supplied by a 24-panel solar array (upgraded in 2021) and stored in three high-capacity Schnyder lithium batteries—an estimated $40,000 investment. An automatic-start diesel generator and a second backup generator provide reliable auxiliary power.

Water is sourced from a clean mountain spring and treated with filters and a chlorination system. Plumbing and pumping infrastructure has been upgraded with modern PEX piping. Propane is delivered in 100-gallon barrels and distributed throughout the property. WiFi is available via a private tower on site.
