Distinguished Tudor Revival Estate in Clarksdale's Finest Neighborhood

Step into a piece of Delta history with this one-of-a-kind Tudor Revival home, resting on nearly an acre of landscaped grounds in Clarksdale's most desirable neighborhood. Built in 1973 and spanning over 4,200 square feet, this timeless property blends architectural charm and comfort, making it the perfect forever home. The striking exterior—crafted from natural Arkansas stone—is complemented by dramatic gables and diamond-paned windows, creating unforgettable curb appeal that beckons you home.

Inside, the home is full of character-rich details: cypress walls in the study sourced from a historic Arkansas barn, a stately stone fireplace in the den, and an impressive kitchen and breakfast room with exposed stone accents and butcher block counter tops. A large formal dining room connects the foyer and kitchen, making entertaining easy. The study is a standout space and sure to be a favorite, with warm cypress walls, built-in shelving, and windows overlooking the circular drive.

Throughout the home, refinished hardwood and natural stone floors pair with leaded glass windows, filling each room with amazing natural light. Just behind the living room, a sunporch overlooks the backyard, while a covered patio provides the perfect spot to relax on fall evenings once the fire has gone out inside. The expansive grounds feature nearly an acre of mature landscaping and a workshop with covered golf cart parking at the edge of the property.

With 4 spacious bedrooms and 3.5 baths, the home offers flexibility—including two potential primary suites, one on each level. The current downstairs primary features bay windows and French doors opening to the patio, while the upstairs suite includes a jacuzzi tub, walk-in shower, and an original stained-glass window that adds even more character. One of the upstairs bedrooms has a private balcony with a spiral staircase that leads down to the yard, and it connects to the fourth bedroom through a Jack and Jill bath.
