The surrounding area is comprised of small farms and homesteads, offering a tranquil getaway just minutes from downtown Statesboro.

Little Lotts Creek Farm is incredibly diverse for a property of its size. There is a 1-acre clearing with a new well and power that would make a perfect homesite or weekend getaway at the end of a long, winding driveway. The mile-long county dirt road has only a handful of neighbors, and the surrounding area is primarily composed of small farms and agricultural fields. The property backs up to Little Lotts Creek and a backwater cypress slough. The adjacent neighbor has over 750 acres, and the creek, swamp, and cypress sloughs create a peaceful and quiet buffer.

Little Lotts Creek swamp, cypress slough, and freshwater marsh offer ample opportunity to shoot wood ducks. The mature pine and hardwood stands backing up to the freshwater marsh create perfect habitat diversity of feed and bedding for whitetail deer and also wild turkeys. The property offers significant privacy and would make an excellent small hunting tract, located just minutes from town. The surrounding neighborhood has lots of agriculture to support an abundant wildlife population.
