GUERNSEY, WYOMING

Located in Wyoming's eastern plains, Guernsey is where western history and outdoor adventure meet to bring a true Wyoming experience.

The Town of Guernsey is named for New Yorker C.A. Guernsey, who in 1880 moved west and purchased land in what was then Laramie County. C.A. Guernsey was a legislator, rancher, mining promoter, and author of the book, "Wyoming Cowboy Days". Mr. Guernsey was also instrumental in building the Guernsey Dam.

Town of Guernsey was incorporated in 1902 when the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad reached the area. At the time of its incorporation, Guernsey was well known as the "Hub of the Oregon Trail".
