PROPERTY DESCRIPTION

51.23 acres primed and ready for development in one of North Henry County's most strategic and rapidly evolving corridors.

Located at the intersection of Rex Road and East Atlanta Road, this property is one of the last remaining early-stage subdivisions left from the 2006–2007 development cycle—offering a rare second chance at a stalled but highly desirable project.

With curbing and cul-de-sac cuts already in place, the groundwork is set for a developer to step in and accelerate progress. The tract lies in unincorporated Henry County and is currently zoned RA with a land use designation of Private Preserve—presenting a strong canvas for residential development, conservation communities, or a transitional land play as nearby growth continues to push outward.

Positioned near major transportation arteries and surrounded by established neighborhoods, schools, and employment centers, this site meets the market's demand for new rooftops while offering a cost-efficient jump-start thanks to existing infrastructure improvements.

Opportunities like this rarely come back around. This is one of the few surviving pre-recession projects still in its infancy—ready for a forward-thinking developer or investor to pick up where plans once left off.

Don't let this land investment opportunity pass you by. Contact us today for maps, concept planning details, and development guidance on maximizing the potential of this 51-acre North Henry County tract.
